Bangalore

Bangalore is located on the Deccan Plateau in the south-eastern part of Karnataka. It is India's third most populous city and fifth-most populous urban agglomeration. Though historical references to the city predate 900 CE, a modern written history of continuous settlement exists only from 1537, when Kempe Gowda I, built a mud-brick fort at the site and established it as a province of the imperial Vijayanagara Empire. Today, as a large and growing metropolis, Bangalore is home to some of the most well reputed colleges and research institutions in India, public sector heavy industries, software companies, aerospace, telecommunications, and defence organisations. Bangalore is known as the Silicon Valley of India because of its preeminent position as the nation's leading IT employer and exporter. A demographically diverse city, Bangalore is a major economic hub and the fastest growing metropolis in India.
